Our services

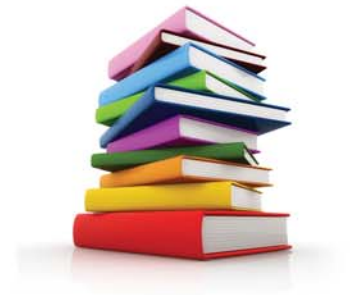

We have advised schools for more than 30 years, mainly in the voluntary aided sector. Schools and their governing bodies face a considerable number of challenges in the modern world in delivering the curriculum. They have to be aware of a raft of legislation and guidance notes from government departments and deal with policy issues implemented by local education authorities. They constantly have to be aware of the need to improve a delivery of the curriculum whilst operating within their budget. Head teachers and governing bodies play a vital role in the education of our children and need clear expert professional advice.

We specialise in:

- Advising governors of their duties and responsibilities
- Disposals and acquisition of school property
- Claims by parents and complaints raised by them
- Advice on formulation of admission policies and the application of those policies
- Advising on disciplinary issues and appeals against permanent exclusion and discrimination claims
- Building Schools for the Future projects and documentation
- Staff, employment and HR issues

Some recent examples of our work...

Taylor&Emmet LLP has considerable experience in acting for schools, including primary and secondary, in the voluntary aided and the private sectors. We recently successfully completed a very complex transaction involving the construction of a special needs state school within the grounds of a voluntary aided school, under a project named "Co-location." We guided the governing body and the trustees of the school through very extensive documentation and requirements. These included issues relating to the funding and carrying out of the works under the Building Schools for the Future initiative.

Taylor&Emmet also assisted with the development of a sports hall and outdoor soccer courts involving a private investor, lottery funding and the creation of a new charitable trust. Complex leases and management agreements were drawn up to meet the needs of the school, the private investor and the public use of the facilities.
